Unbalanced Criticism
in England

Every day or so we are told of some person in Great Britain who was never heard of before in a public way, uttering very unfriendly criticisms of those who are charged with the administration of the nation's affairs. If an obscure member of the British House of Commons says something unpleasant, it is flashed over the wires to America as if it was as momentous as the thundering of Jove himself. A number of more or less timid people read his observations, and, lacking the ability or the mental equipment to distinguish between the vapors of a nonentity and the studied utterance of a conservative statesman, they join the ranks of the pessimists and declare that the real voice of the people has at last shattered the silence, and take pleasure in repeating to their cronies that "conditions are terrible." There is no doubt that even extreme criticisms, provided they are based upon truth and sound reasoning, may have great value, but in many cases we protest that the scales have been tampered with, and that the oracle has given a fictitious weight.

Several days ago, the newspapers of Canada were treated to an outburst from Horatio Bottomley, ex-M.P., for Hackney, who achieved the very zenith of absurdity when he solemnly called upon Premier Asquith to recall Lord Kitchener, and backed up his indiscreet appeal with a threat that if the Bottomlevian appeal was not listened to, that he would rouse all England. We are a little uncertain as to whether the time limit for the fulfillment of the pledge has been reached, but we have not yet heard of any cataclysm in the Motherland, so that perhaps the day of the awakening has been postponed to what St. Paul called "a more convenient season."

Yet we doubt not that there were hundreds of people in Canada, many of whom had perhaps never heard of the name of this offensive self advertiser before, whose spirits drooped when they read his vociferations. The jest is again repeated when Sir A. B. Markham makes a vehement attack on the absent minister of war, to be followed by one, Charles P. Trevelyan, who gets a lot of free publicity through advocating peace on Germany's terms on the grounds that a "war of attrition means for us, as well as for Germany, utter and irretrievable ruin."

So it goes. Everything has gone wrong; everything has been mismanaged; everything has been in exhibition of ineptitude, according to the critics who are taking advantage of the times to get their insignificant persons into the limelight. To those who know the Bottomleys and the Markhams and the Trevellyans, there is no need to sound a note of warning, but to the larger public who are influenced by the noise in the press, some protest is necessary to ward off the irritating stings of these featherweights.—Saskatoon Star.

In Lighter Vein

"The voice of faction is absent, and there are only insignificant cross currents."—Premier Asquith at the Guild-Hall. How Lord Northcliffe must hate being called a cross-current!—Beck's Weekly.

"Buy your Christmas present now and save 50 per cent.," says a store on St. Catherine street. "Don't buy them at all and save 100 per cent." is a sign that we looked for in vain.—Beck's Weekly.

Talkative Passenger (trying to get into conversation): "I see—or—you've lost your arm?"
Wounded Officer (rather warily): "So I have. How careless of me!"

Ford Notes and Comments

"....." The perspiration rolled off his genial face, as he made the foregoing remark, and we do not wonder. Cranking a Frozen Ford at midnight, before a small and varied audience is not the most edifying occupation we can think of. After exhausting their energy at cranking the owner of the car and his voluntary helpers pushed the dampling up and down Main street in a further endeavour to coax an explosion. But their efforts were all in vain.

Just about this time a suggestion was made. "Did you ever try a little ether?" (Laughter) "It is really a good thing." A traveller told me about it. (prolonged laughter interrupted by a voice from the sidewalk. "Bet you a dollar I can start it." The ether was not taken up.) "Is this where it sparks" looking at the exhaust. "How about putting a little ether on it?" "I think you had better chloroform it," suggested another man.

The car was eventually started and the owner left for his homestead. Six miles out of town however, the engine died and "Yimmy" had to walk back to town. There, the secret he out. We had no intention of telling you who it was; it just slipped out. Poor Yimmy.

Ford cars are really very provoking at times. Oh yes! We heard of a young gentleman who offered to take a young lady home the other day. After crossing the track the car stalled, and repeated efforts to start it were unsuccessful. Finally the two young people pushed the car off the trail, so that it would not be in the way of traffic, and wended their respective ways home on foot.

"Do you think a little ether would have made it go?"

Floyd Horn, Ford car expert, ran the water out of the radiator of Mr. Kelly's car this morning.

Evolution of the Apple.

Apples are few in the economy of the world's use and taste. At the beginning of the last century few varieties were known, and we can go back in history to a time when all apples were little, sour and pickery—crab apples and nothing else. The crab apple was and is in its wildness nothing but a rosebush. Away back in time the wild rose with its pretty blossoms that turn to little red balls, apple flavored, and the thorny crab had the same grandmother.

Grain Board Allow Shippers to Change Their Billings

The Board of Grain Commissioners have the following notice posted on the Grain Exchange at Winnipeg on November 15th:

"Owing to the heavy yield of grain all over the west a general shortage of cars exists and the fact that it takes on an average three weeks for a car to travel to Port William or Port Arthur, the Board of Grain Commissioners, in conjunction with the railway companies, have decided to allow all grain shippers to change their orders from Port William or Port Arthur to Saskatoon and give such orders preference over the shipments first, as a car can be unloaded and reloaded from that point in less than one week, and in this way allow the railway companies to give a very much quicker service. Shippers taking advantage of this will get their grain under cover and be able to finance on the government warehouse receipts."

December 3rd.

All men who have already expressed their willingness to enlist for active service with the 9th Battalion, commanded by Lieut-Col. Nesmyth, are reminded that Major C. W. Robinson, will be in Oyen on Friday, December 3rd, to have recruits physically examined and sworn in. Be in town that day and do your duty to your country.

Peace Agitation In Germany Said To Be Spreading

According to the President of a big Berlin bank, just back from Germany, peace agitation is beginning seriously to permeate that country. A huge demonstration of several thousand women took place in Berlin, the banker says. "Riot caused and the police had to charge with drawn sabres. There were 200 victims, all women. The German censorship suppressed all references to the riots."

Muhlbach Items

Mr. Geo. Scott of Lovena, drove to this district last week in his car delivering meat to the Muhlbach threshing outfit.

The threshing outfit recently purchased by Mr. H. Muhlbach is doing great work in this district, under the able management of Mr. Muhlbach's son-in-law, H. J. McDonald.

Several hundred acres of grain is still unthreshed in this district. Work is being pushed forward with all possible speed and hopes are entertained that it will be completed before a snow storm comes along.

One day last week while the crew of the Jewish threshing outfit were at dinner, a fire was started by some means. Before the flames were extinguished three bundle wagons with their loads were destroyed and one animal was severely burned.

The school entertainment and dance given at the Rush Centre School last week, was a great success, both socially and financially.

Mrs. J. Arnold accompanied by her sister Miss Dora Frodrickson, arrived last week from Bowden, Alta. They are the guests of their parents here.

Skating at Lindquist's Slough

The skating season has opened here. A small party who went out to Lindquist's slough on Monday evening to try the ice, found it in A. 1. condition. Word was soon passed round that a sheet of ice "far better than any city rink" was at the disposal of all who cared to use same, and a number of enthusiasts drove out in cars the next evening.

If the present ideal weather conditions continue, Lindquist's slough will be the scene of numerous skating parties in the near future.
